Why are drugs especially dangerous for young people? Young people's brains are growing and developing until they are in their mid-20's. This is especially true of the prefrontal cortex, which is used to form decisions. Taking drugs when young can interfere in developmental processes occurring in the brain. It can also effect their decision-making. They may be more likely to do risky things, such as unsafe sex and thoughtless driving. The earlier young people start using drugs, the greatest their chances of continuing to use them and become addicted for drugs later in life. Taking drags when you are young can contribute in the development of adult health problems, such as heart disease, high blood pressure, and sleep disorders.
